This banner saddens me.

It reminds me of when Poetry was a way of life, a time when Jack's offered great burgers, hot coffee and a hub for folks to gather and "chew the fat".

It reminds me of a group of folks who took it upon themselves to create an incorporated town built on secrecy, intimidation and lies.

It reminds me that a few people took advantage of, including just enough people, to bring this to vote, while many others were not aware until a week or two before the vote. It reminds me of people who are called troublemakers for having a voice of opposition and folks who were told they can't vote.

It reminds me of the historical portion of Poetry and Campground which is destroyed because what they offered was never enough, resulting with the end of the relationship because they don't want any part of the town of Poetry.

It reminds me that Poetry will never be the same, community wise. Our community, irreversibly, destroyed.

I miss our old Poetry. God bless Jack and the history and long term Poetry citizens for having given is a great time. It's gone. I find it sad.
